ANNUAL REPORT ON MEASURES TO PROTECT THE IDENTITIES OF COVERT AGENTS

The Intelligence Identities Protection Act of 1982 stands as a positive statement regarding the concerns of Congress about the protection of the identities of the men and women in the U.S. Intelligence Community who work at the craft of intelligence, and of the individuals (many at the risk of arrest) who cooperate covertly with the United States in the conduct of foreign intelligence operations. This Act, along with the Classified Information Procedures Act (CIPA), provides the Department of Justice with a framework to deal with the problem of deliberate exposures of classified identities information.
